

Leonards Department Store Announce Big Ben Purchase

Leonards, a leading Los Angeles chain of super department stores, officially announced today it has purchased the entire operations of Big Ben, an 82,000 square foot department store in Torrance, along with execution of a lease for a Burbank location.

Both locations are being leased from Airport Plaza, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Golden State Properties.

Robert Leonard, Jr., president of the Leonards chain, and C. C. Wilmot, president of Big Ben Stores, announced jointly that negotiations have finally been completed, and Leonards the close of escrow.

The stores name will be changed to Leonards. Many departments will be rearranged and many lease departments changed.

Robert G. Graw, executive vice president and general manager of the Leonards chain stated: "Our plans call for construction of the building in Burbank, and opening by next spring."

Graw further stated the acquisition of these two new facilities marks the beginning of a vast expansion program by the Leonards chain.

"I plan to gradually upgrade the soft lines to meet the challenge of the conventional department store competitors in the Los Angeles area," stated Graw.

By spring of 1963, the Leonards chain will consist of four super department stores and two specialty volume appliance operations with a total selling space of approximately 400,000 square feet and an anticipated doubling of the gross volume.

The furniture and appliance departments in all Leonards operation will be owned and operated by Leonard, while all other departments are leased.

Leonards will maintain a strong central control of all advertising and promotion on a home office level. Jerry Moss, advertising manager, is gearing a strong, hard hitting advertising program to take full advantage of the
